Ladies and gentlemen,

In answering questions regarding his investigation, the detective has testified to several matters which he described as his opinions or conclusions. You are only permitted to consider these opinions or conclusions if you find that they help explain why the detective did or did not pursue various leads during his investigation. You must not, however, assume that the detective's opinions or conclusions are accurate or correct. The facts about which he has expressed opinions, like all facts in this case, are for you to decide.
